GEN. CHARLES LEE.

Gen. Charles Lee was an Englishman by birth, and of a different family from the Lees of Virginia. He entered the British army when a mere boy, and passed his whole life up to the time of his retirement from the American army, in the active duties of his profession. In 1775 he came to America, and warmly espousing the cause of this country, was placed next to Washington in command of the army. Nowhere can there be found a clearer, more authentic or more reliable account of the affair of Monmouth than is contained in the "memoirs" of "Light Horse Harry" Lee. That officer was present on the occasion, and being a warm friend of Washington, was not disposed to offer any false or unfounded apologies for his namesake's conduct. His account of the affair is as follows: "The united body of the advance corps was placed under the command of Major General Lee, for the express purpose of bringing on battle, should the enemy still continue in his position at Monmouth Court House. In this officer was combined long and varied experience, with a profound military genius. He held too, not only the peculiar confidence of the Commander-in-chief, but that of Congress, the nation and the army. On approaching Englishtown he received orders from Washington to strike at the British rear, unless 'strong reasons' forbade it; at the same time advising him of his approach to support him. Continuing to advance he discovered the enemy in motion. Clifton having perceived various bodies of troops moving on his flanks, and apprehending that the column with his baggage might be grossly insulted, if not seriously injured, wisely resolved, by a forward movement, to check further pursuit. Cornwallis, who led the van, advanced upon Lee. This officer, concluding that he should most effectively answer the object of Washington by drawing the enemy to him, thus reducing the foe to expend his bodily strength, while he saved that of the American army, in a day of uncommon heat, instantly began to retrace; to take which step he was additionally induced by discerning that the corps on his flank, under Brigadier Scott, had repassed the ravine in his rear. This country abounds with defiles of a peculiar sort; the valleys are cut by small rivulets with marshy grounds, difficult to man and horse, and impracticable to artillery, except in particular spots. Such was the one in Lee's rear, which Scott had passed. Perceiving in his position to join, rather than recall Scott, he continued to retrace, making good his retreat without injury, and exposing his person to every danger. At this moment Washington came up, and finding his orders disobeyed, required an explanation from General Lee with warmth. Unhappily Lee took offence at the manner in which he had been accosted, and replied unbecomingly, instead of entering into that full explanation, which his own honor, duty to his superior, and the good of his country demanded. Major General Lee was arrested upon sundry charges, tried, found guilty, and sentenced to be suspended from his command in the army for one year. The effect of which was, that the veteran soldier who had relinquished his native country to support a cause dear to his heart, became lost to that of his adoption. The records of the court martial manifest on their face the error of the sentence and it is wonderful how men of honor and of sense could thus submit themselves to the censures of the independent and impartial. If Gen. Lee had been guilty of all the charges as affirmed by their decision, his life was forfeited; he ought to have been cashiered and shot, instead of which the mild sentence of suspension, for a short time, was the punishment inflicted. The truth is, the unfortunate General was only guilty of neglect in not making timely communication of his departure from orders, subject to his discretion, to the Commander-in-chief, which constituted no part of the charges against him. This was certainly a culpable omission; to which was afterwards added personal disrespect, where the utmost respect was not only due, but enjoined by martial law, and enforced by the state of things; but this offense was different, far different from 'disobedience of orders,' or a 'shameful retreat,' neither of which charges were supported by testimony; and both of which were contradicted by fact."

A FOZZILIZED SCANDAL.—The Washington Republican of yesterday gives three columns and a half to the story of the famous Mrs. Gen. Eaton, wife of the Secretary of War (from 1829 to 1831) in Gen. Jackson's cabinet, and whose name was connected with scandals which once convulsed Washington society and excited the country. The other ladies of the cabinet are said to have shown Mrs. Eaton no quarters, but "O. Hickory" stood by her. A reporter of the Republican has interviewed the now venerable lady, who is on a visit to Washington from her home in New York, and her story, as given to him, contradicts much of what passes for history, and in her old age, which is not wholly destitute of the loveliness which made her the most famous American woman of her time, resolutely defends the honor which was so bitterly assailed and so nobly defended by the "Hero of New Orleans." She denies Mr. Barton's statements in many essential points, and presents some strong evidence to prove that she is right and he wrong. Most of the scenes in this scene have passed away, but Mrs. Eaton "still lives." The present dearth of narratives pertaining to choice and clearly subjects has probably led to the publication of this fozzilized scandal.—Balt. Sun.

The Supreme Court of Maine has been called upon to decide that the belief in the supernatural appearance of a spirit advising but not unduly influencing the making of a will, is not of itself such an evidence of insanity as to invalidate the instrument. This curious question arose where the testatrix, a Spiritualist, believed that the spirit of her dead husband appeared to her, and dictated and indicated his approval of her testamentary disposition of her property. So, whatever some people may think, of a belief in the supernatural, this tribunal declares that it is not an evidence of mental alienation in a technical sense.

In Saxony a fellow is required to court his girl by daylight, the old woman sitting between them; and she allows no winking or nodding. Sitting down upon a buzz-saw can be rendered pleasant in comparison.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

Nearly all diseases originate from Indigestion and Torpidity of the Liver, and relief is always anxiously sought after. If the Liver is regulated in its action, health is almost invariably secured. Want of action in the Liver causes Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Pain in the Shoulders, Cough, Chills, Dizziness, Sour Stomach, bad taste in the mouth, bilious attacks, palpitation of the heart, depression of spirits, or the blues, and a hundred other symptoms, for which SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR is the best remedy that has ever been discovered. Its action is mild, effectual, and being a simple vegetable compound, can do no injury in any quantities that it may be taken. It is harmless in every way; it has been used for FORTY YEARS, and hundreds of the good and great from all parts of the country will vouch for its being the purest and best.

SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, OR MEDICINE.
Is harmless.
Is no drastic violent medicine.
Is sure to cure if taken regularly.
Is no intoxicating beverage.
Is a faultless family medicine.
